An historic hall that was closed to the public four months ago after the heating system broke down will re-open on June 4.

The ballroom at Anstice Memorial Hall, in Madeley, closed temporarily and will resume activities to coincide with its inaugural film festival and a food and craft fair in the nearby square on the same date.

Regular centre users had to be relocated while the work, which included the installation of a boiler and electrical repairs were carried out.

Madeley Town Council clerk Kath Petty said: "We are re-opening on June 4 after being closed since Christmas. We were sorting out problems with the heating. The new boiler has been put in and we have taken advantage of the closure to carry out some other work in the building."
